To Medea

Keith Shillington

As flat—
As flat and as dimensionless as wind and time
I creep my silent alley out
And race my shadows with the fading star.
As mad—
I howl my paper breath
Into the massive quiet
And watch the echoes fade as glass.
As futile—
I tear the empty space with bleeding fists—
Trying to reason fear into nothingness.
You know all this.
And yet you ask passage on this Argosy,
This quest—
This search—
This fool-filled errand—
And with your trust
Bring peace and naturalness—
Bring hope—
